

1965 2+2 convertible on Ebay

Posted by OldInjun - 2017/10/06 09:50

Owned by a resto shop in NE PA, rotisserie restoration. Not original, having had a/c, 4-speed, and a '66 Tri-Power unit added, but well optioned for one who prioritizes that over originality. The market seems to appreciate that - it's bid to $49,055 with 3 days left to go.

Click here for link

=====

Re:1965 2+2 convertible on Ebay

Posted by 8lug - 2017/10/06 10:42

Maybe a little respect for our cars, about time!

=====

Re:1965 2+2 convertible on Ebay

Posted by fredscat - 2017/10/07 11:07

I did not see this car under Catalina on ebay! My thought are the car is very nice but not a matching number car! Too much yellow for me. I am seriously thinking of letting go of my 2 plus 2. I will watch this one close to see what happens! I brought my car back to NJ in July and it has been sitting in a garage ever since. I just cannot bring myself to drive this car in this area-way too many crazy drivers around here!

=====

Re:1965 2+2 convertible on Ebay

Posted by OldInjun - 2017/10/07 11:54

I really object to calling a car "matching numbers" when it has an incorrect (1966) intake (probably originally a 4BBL engine, too) and a 4-speed transplanted in place of the automatic. More accurately it should be labeled as having the "original engine block" (if it really is) or "correct engine block" if it's not original to the car.